

URBAN FOREST SURVEY

Travis AFB, California

Colorado State University and the Center for Environmental Management of Military Lands (CEMML) in cooperation with Travis Air Force Base (AFB) is conducting an Urban Forest Survey, summer 2021.

CEMML is looking for hires with experience through work or courses involving urban forest tree identification in California. Those employed will use data loggers to document species and locations. Must be able to walk five or more miles a day in developed areas, and be able to gain and maintain access onto the base. Colorado State University conducts background checks on all final candidates.

Hourly pay begins at $20.
